APPAREL TRAINING KITS

For a unit engaged in training against an opposing force, apparel is as important as military clothing. The absence of this essential part of training apparel will be glaringly obvious and potentially embarrassing in the nation of deployment. The military's only objective is to win battles and war, this can be brought within reach only when the right gear is employed for training scenarios.

The success of OPFOR training rests on the Military's ability to be prepared for a range of threats. In order to do this, Military Forces must utilize the most realistic apparel/uniforms in their OE training scenarios. Any Actor could pose a grave threat to the security of military personnel, and unless our soldiers are familiar with the apparel likely to be worn by a Role Player that could represent a threat to safety or life, they will be unable to make decisive moves when real-world situations confront them on the battlefield.

This requires that every soldier must be trained on what the non-actors will be wearing in enemy territory. The COE can only achieve a high degree of accuracy if authentic ethnic attire/uniforms is worn during an engagement with insurgents and Civilians on the Battlefield.
